City Public Works Budget Offers No Surprises for Fiscal Year '01

by Betsy Likowski

The Department of Public Works proposed budget for Fiscal Year 2001 (FY01) is one with numbers close to last fiscal year's and there are no burning issues facing the department. The city council reviewed this budget at a worksession on Wednesday, May 3.

The proposed departmental budget for FY01 is $1,701,000, up from $1,686,200 in Fiscal Year 2000 (FY00). The difference is basically from increased personnel expenses.

Saving monies and providing better services are the driving forces behind the main issues facing the department. It is proposed that service on the Greenbelt Connection end at 2 p.m. on Sundays. Hanover Parkway is being repaired and the program of working on some city streets every year to maintain the infrastructure will mean that this year Woodland Way and streets in Lakewood will be repaired.

Some horticultural work will be contracted out and preventive work on vehicles will continue to be contracted out. Public Works will switch from using temporary workers to hiring non-classified workers during the busiest months.

Greenbelt Connection

The Greenbelt Connection provides call-a-ride service within the city of Greenbelt. It is heavily subsidized with an estimated $8,000 coming from revenues in this upcoming fiscal year and the rest of the needed funds, $55,000, coming from general city revenues.

Cutting out service after 2 p.m. on Sunday is proposed since there has been little ridership after that time. Council asked for ridership numbers.

A proposed fare hike would raise fares from $1 to $1.25 for seniors and children and from $1.50 to $1.75 for those ages 18 - 62. Councilmembers spent time discussing the fare increase, the usage of the service, the need for the service, and is it just a glorified taxi service. And public works personnel described the realities of the situation.

There is a limit to how many can be served with this type of service, explained acting Director of the Department of Public Works Kenny Hall. The service is booked solid, said Antoinette Conrad, the woman who takes the calls. And it can take time for each rider. For example, for some there is no way they can be scheduled in a 15 minute time slot. It takes them awhile to get to the vehicle, in it, and to their destination, she explained.

Trash and Recycling

The city recycling rate for FY01 is estimated to be 45%. The city goal is to recycle 50% of the waste stream by 2004. The rate of recycling has been gradually increasing up from 37% in FY98. The city is only estimated to make $300 on the sale of recyclables in FY01 and has to pay to have bottles, cans, yard waste, and loose leaves taken off the city's hands. A fee raise for recycling is recommended by staff.

Fees make up the bulk of the revenue of the trash and recycling budget account, which is estimated to be $461,600 in FY01. Expenses are estimated at $435,000, which is up from $422,900 last fiscal year and that is mostly due to employee benefits.

Mayor Judith Davis asked Hall about picking up leaves in the Greenbelt East neighborhoods. When a call comes in for leaf pick-up and the city picks up their refuse, the city picks up their leaves, explained Hall.

Councilmember Thomas White asked if some of the homeowners in Greenbelt Homes Inc. could just rake their leaves to the curb. See PUBLIC WORKS, page 5

City FOP Asks for 10 Percent Cost-of-Living Pay Adjustment

by Diane Oberg

Higher pay and benefits topped the agenda for the annual budget meeting between the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) and the Greenbelt City Council on May 10. In addition, the officers asked for a review of the city's snow/liberal leave policies, as a result of concerns about how the January 25, snowstorm was handled.

Pay Requests

Greenbelt FOP President Craig Rich told council that over the last 10 years, city pay raises had lagged the consumer price index (CPI) by ten percent. In 1996, 1997, and 1998, city employees did not receive a cost of living adjustment, (although many received longevity increases or performance pay). In addition to their own loss of purchasing power, the officers felt that the city was now at a competitive disadvantage in hiring new officers.

According to the FOP, entry level salaries for police officers in surrounding jurisdictions are all higher than what Greenbelt pays. Based on an Internet search, Rich provided starting salaries for other jurisdictions. Among departments with fewer than 100 officers (Greenbelt has 53), starting salaries range from $27,400 in Hyattsville to $31,182 in Gaithersburg. Pay is generally higher in the larger jurisdictions, with starting salaries ranging from $30,765 for the Prince George's County police to $33,682 for the Maryland State Police. Greenbelt's starting pay for certified officers is $27,685. The FOP noted, however, that Greenbelt maintains an "officer candidate" pay scale of $26,374, for officers in training or not yet certified. This lower pay puts the city at a competitive disadvantage when competing for recruits with jurisdictions that pay officers full entry level salaries during training.

In addition to limiting the city's ability to hire new officers, the city's low pay scale is also costing it experienced officers, Rich said. He said that one officer Greenbelt hired from the county police force has since returned to county service. In the past, Rich said, "this would never have happened." If city pay scales had kept up with inflation, it would really change the way we look compared with other agencies, he said. Several of the officers present, some relatively experienced, indicated that they were considering leaving for higher pay elsewhere.

To address these problems, the FOP is requesting a ten percent cost of living adjustment in the upcoming fiscal year, plus a ten percent pay scale revision. To avoid future problems, they also request that city workers receive a full cost of living adjustment each year, automatically.

Mayor Judith Davis asked whether all the departments in the FOP's comparison had the same benefits. Some allow officers to retire at 20 years, while in others, officers must work for 30 years. FOP Conductor Michael Dewey thought that all shown have take home cars. Davis requested a comparison including benefits. Councilmember Rodney Roberts also wanted to see how the departments stacked up at the longevity level (the top pay within each pay grade).

Roberts questioned the glum picture painted by the FOP. There must be some benefits to working in Greenbelt, he said, or none of you would be here. While Rich acknowledged that, he said that the job market is so tight right now that it is Greenbelt's low salary that catches (or fails to catch) candidates' eyes. In turn, Roberts said that he does not have a problem with raising officers' pay. "I don't see how anyone can live on $26,000," he said.

City Manager Michael McLaughlin did not comment. See FOP, page 9

Kids Plan New Town In Comm-U-nity Build

by Judith Ransom Bell

As part of the May 6 Community Center Open House, approximately 40 people, ages 2-1/2 to 41, took part in an ingenious game dubbed Comm-U-nity Build. It was a unique opportunity for kids to get a taste of what goes into planning an ideal community.

Studio artist Susan Hale Whitmore initiated the thought process and was the spark behind the plan, according to Renée Landen, community development inspector for the city's Department of Planning and Community Development. Whitmore, Landen, Nicole DeWald, arts coordinator for the Department of Recreation, and Willie Davis, also an inspector with Planning and Community Development, worked together on the project. Nine other people assisted in putting it all together.

The project was broken down into stages, beginning with preparation of a large piece of corrugated cardboard, painted to show land, grass, a lake, streams, and zoned areas before development.

In Stage One the kids could draw on the map any idea that they had about a community. One boy was so intrigued that after he finished his idea he left with his mom and came back with his dad, brothers and sister to continue working.

For Stage Two the planning group had taken business card boxes and cut out the front for buildings and houses. Participants could pick whatever fronts they wanted, and then color them and attach the fronts to the business card boxes and place their buildings on the map. The realization was made by participants that because of zoning they could not place certain things where they wanted. For example, one of the restrictions was that if a tree was disrupted, it had to be replaced.

One boy put in a road; someone thought up the name of Dreamsville. The process lasted three hours. Using the simple tools of cardboard, paper, paint, paste, magic markers and black butcher paper (for the road) a group of kids had a blast building Dreamsville.

Groups Seek Contributions

by Barbara Bonham Young

At a work session on April 12, members of the Greenbelt City Council welcomed and questioned representatives of various Greenbelt groups wishing to obtain contributions from the city in the next budget cycle. Mayor Judith Davis noted that total requests amount to $4,700 over what City Manager Michael McLaughlin has included in his proposed budget. McLaughlin has budgeted no change from the $62,100 included in the current year's budget.

The largest request, for $17,600, was made by the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC), followed by a request for $15,000 from the Boys and Girls Club. GAC also requested

$7,200 for its Youth Initiative program. Michael Cooney explained that among other things, the Arts See CONTRIBUTIONS, page 2

No Exceptions Ban A Simplistic Policy

I write to correct and amplify my remarks about drugs and the police, made at council's worksession regarding the city's public safety budget, and referred to in Pauline Bordas' letter to the editor, May 11, 2000.

First, I inquired about the nature of a state law that makes it impossible for municipal police departments to consider any applicant who admits to ever having used drugs, even once. I raised this issue in the context of a briefing on the police department's difficulty in hiring officers. The chief suggested that one factor excluding large numbers of potential candidates from consideration was this no-exceptions ban on anyone with even a passing, long-ago firsthand knowledge of drugs.

At the meeting, I suggested that the council communicate to our elected State representatives some measure of displeasure at having this State law dictate the city's personnel practices to us. I believe that council should try to discuss serious issues candidly and without worrying about how it'll look in the paper; however, since my colleagues did not choose to discuss the point further, that was the end of the matter. (Note to News Review: How I wish that more of the "non-starter" suggestions I make could get such prominent coverage!)

Finally, as I read it, the letter reflects a belief that anyone who has ever used an illegal drug becomes permanently unworthy of police work or work in any other field where children might someday try to look up to them. Well, all drug use does not create instant monsters, despite the "drug war" hysteria. And if obedience to the law is the underlying concern, then all prospective police officers who admit under polygraph to having ever driven drunk should be barred from service, since this crime is far more inherently dangerous to others.

No, I wouldn't suggest that past drug use be dismissed lightly; but the city should have the discretion to weigh an applicant's current judgment, professionalism, mental health, education, compassion, work ethic, and character fairly and as a full package, and not be bound by a simplistic one-strike-you're-out policy.

I appreciate this chance to explain an apparently unpopular and misunderstood opinion in the space needed.

Center wants to spend money on advertising and on developing a program to find out what presentations draw the most patrons and why.

Cooney also discussed ongoing plumbing problems in the space. Cooney said the Youth Initiative funds would be used to further involve Springhill Lake and Greenbelt Elementary School participants.

Several representatives of the Boys and Girls Club appeared to support the club's request for $15,000. Stressing the need for parent volunteers, Athletic director Darlene Lawrence said the club has begun to require fundraising of its members, and that the goal at this time is to raise $4,000. She noted that the cost of the awards banquet has tripled in recent years.

Other organizations represented at the work session and amounts requested are:

Organization Amount	Requested
Aquatic Booster Club	$2,500
Greenbelt Concert Band	4,600
Greenbelt Little League	6,600
Greenbelt Golden Age Club	5,100
Greenbelt Babe Ruth League	6,600
Greenbelt Senior Softball	1,000
Greenbelt Writers' Group	100

The Greenbelt Double Dutch League requested $4,000 but was not represented at the work session.

Public Works Employee Breaks Both Feet

by Barbara Bonham Young

Thomas Ray, 26, a local resident, Public Works crew man and Fire Department volunteer, suffered two broken feet when he jumped to the ground from a recycling truck on May 9. Taken by ambulance to Doctors Community Hospital after the 11 a.m. accident, Ray was later moved to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore and released pending surgery. Until that occurs, Ray is resting at the firehouse.

The driver of the truck, Kent Rowlette, has been with Public Works since 1987. The other crew man present, in addition to Ray, was Jeffrey Gray, a temporary employee who has worked previous summers as a crew man on the trucks.

Circumstances surrounding the accident remain unclear. A preliminary investigation has been undertaken by Acting Superintendent of Operations Bill Phelan and Acting Public Works Director Kenneth Hall, both of whom were attending a two-day conference and unavailable for comment.

On the advice of his attorney, Ray would not comment on the incident. City Manager Michael McLaughlin said the city "still has investigation to do." Providing background, he noted that "Crews have developed the practice before they take the truck to be emptied, of packing down materials so they don't fly away. They do this by riding in the dumping bins that are on the side of the truck, riding to the top, packing the material down, and then riding down. 'Always in the past they have done this in visual and verbal contact with the driver. In this case, apparently there was some lack of communication.'"

Senior Softball

by Burt Kerr

The Greenbelt Senior Softball team is back. New members have swelled the ranks to 25 players and have added skill to every position on the field including hitting.

Friday, the team took a double header from the Bowie Bronze with seven homers hit. Your local News Review reporter Al Geiger hit the first grand slam home run of his career and Greenbelter Lefty Smith also powered a homer out into right field. The first game was a squeaker, 13 to 12, but the second game was under control and won by the score of 16 - 9.

The team has improved under the leadership of new manager-coach Ray Reed to three wins and four losses. Anyone wishing to participate or watch can call Reed at 301-568-6977.

Irving and Pearl Siegel

Irving Siegel

Irving Murray Siegel, 19 Court Ridge Road, died on May 9, 2000 after a long illness. Mr. Siegel was 80 years old.

He was born in New York City and went to school there and in New Jersey, where he attended an agricultural college.

He served in the Civilian Conservation Corps in Washington state and in the Pacific during WWII as medical personnel.

He and his wife Pearl moved to the Washington Metropolitan area in 1946 and have lived here ever since. After moving to Greenbelt in 1973, he became active in the Eleanor and Franklin D. Roosevelt Democratic Club and was a chief Democratic election judge for many years.

As a member of the Greenbelt Golden Age Club, he and his wife took many trips with the club. In 1997 he was president of the club, and continued to serve on the board.

He was a member of OASIS and in addition to taking courses, was a tutor in their Intergenerational Reading Program. He got a lot of personal satisfaction out of this, as it helped a child learn to read.

For the past three years Mr. Siegel was a member of the Arts Advisory Board of Greenbelt. His hobby was photography and he was a member of the Greenbelt Photography Club.

The Greenbelt Community Center was where he liked to be most of all. He was a regular, daily visitor there for meetings, events, the food and friendship lunch program, playing pool with his friends and just visiting in the Senior Lounge.

He made many friends over the years and he really loved Greenbelt.

He is survived by his wife Pearl, his daughters Bryna Anton (Peter) and Ellen Siegel and his grandchildren Philip, Terran and James.

Memorial services will be held May 28 at 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center.

Contributions may be made to Washington Home Hospice, 3720 Upton Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016.

Seven neurofibromatosis research projects studying NF-1 and NF-2 will be described by their principal investigators at a meeting on Sunday, May 21, at The National Institutes of Health, Building 31 C Wing, Room 6 on the 6th floor, 9000 Rockville Pike, Bethesda, from 1 to 5 p.m. Free printed materials about NF will be available. PUBLIC WORKS instead of having to bag them up. City Manager Michael McLaughlin replied that staff will take a look at the situation.

Streets

Several streets will have work done on them in the upcoming fiscal year: Southway, Woodland Way, Springhill Lane, and streets in the Lakewood neighborhood. And landscaping will be placed on Hanover Parkway at Hunting Ridge. With more than 25 miles of streets in the city to maintain, $503,100 is budgeted for this purpose in FY01.

Work is ongoing on the repair of Hanover Parkway. There is even debris under the parkway, said Hall, so the workers are having to dig down 30 inches deep to get rid of it all. It was not built according to design plans, he said. In some places there is merely two to three inches of asphalt on top of soil, said McLaughlin.

The city is sharing a street sweeper with several other jurisdictions. Hall thought the arrangement is working well. The sweeper is putting an emphasis on cleaner streets that the city never had in the last 25 years, opined McLaughlin.

Parks

The city has 496 acres of parkland including 31 playgrounds and four ballfield complexes. Park expenses will raise slightly with $792,200 proposed for FY01, up from $777,800 in FY00. Employee benefits have increased from $145,600 in FY00 to $161,400 in the FY01 budget. And park and playground maintenance expenses will increase from $376,900 in FY00 to $387,400 in FY01.

In a new program $10,000 is budgeted to contract out some simple mulching and weeding jobs.

This will allow the city's horticultural workers to focus on more complex tasks. "We're better off having our people do more skilled things" and have the contractor do the less skilled things, said City Horticulturalist Bill Phelan.

Personnel

The total for salaries for the 48 public works employees is $1,597,000 in the proposed FY01 budget. This budget year it is planned to stop using temporary help and instead hire non-classified part time employees. Also this fiscal year it is planned to hire a new director of the public works department.

The total estimated expenses for the public works administration in FY01 is proposed to be $515,400. Personnel expenses will come to $417,000 of this.

Miscellaneous

The proposed budgeted amounts in FY01 for other aspects of the department are: $194,200 for maintenance of multi-purpose equipment; $52,200 for Roosevelt Center Mall; $1,000 for the city cemetery near Ivy Lane; $56,700 for maintaining the Municipal Building; and $72,200 for traffic control.

The program of contracting out preventive maintenance on the city vehicles has proved to be a success and will be continued. It has improved the condition of the vehicles and resulted in less down time for each vehicle. And the resulting

Teacher Recruitment Fair at Roosevelt

The Prince George's County Public School System will hold a "Teacher Recruitment Fair," Saturday, May 20, 7:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, 7601 Hanover Parkway. Career opportunities are available in early childhood, elementary education, special education, secondary content areas, and specialty areas such as foreign languages, library media, and French Immersion. Potential teachers should bring resumes, college transcripts, NTE/PRAXIS scores, and state teaching certificates.

"We are looking for good teachers and are ready to hire 1,800 new teachers on the spot," said Judith Miller, associate superintendent of Human Resources. "We offer an excellent starting salary and higher salaries are currently being negotiated."

The Prince George's County Public School System offers extensive staff development and career advancement potential. To schedule an intersavings have offset the rising cost of fuel used by the city's fleet of vehicles.

Representatives from Washington EAR, a reading service for the visually impaired, pled with council to continue the tradition of giving a grant to the service. No monies for this are in the FY01 budget; in FY00 $1,000 was given to Washington EAR.

rectly on the FOP request. When asked by Councilmember Thomas White, he noted that the personnel officer is conducting a citywide pay and benefit study, which he expects to present to council within two months. The budget includes $125,000 which can be used to pay the cost of any approved increases. That amount, he acknowledged, could be too much or too little.

Retention Issues

Other issues affecting the city's ability to attract and retain officers, according to State Trustee John Rogers (a Greenbelt officer), are the lack of promotion opportunities and the lack of benefits. Compared to bigger agencies, there is relatively little room for advancement in Greenbelt's 53 officer force. While the city has responded to the past FOP concerns by creating the Master Patrol Officer rank between the Private First Class and Corporal ranks, in a relatively small force, there are years when few or no positions are posted. Rogers noted that there could be "a lot of room for upward mobility" in the next five years if senior officers retired when eligible, but that will likely be followed by another lull. Davis and Rogers agreed on one thing; there is little the city can do to increase promotion opportunities with a small force. "We can't have five chiefs," said Davis.

Rich also called for a review of the entire police pay scale against other departments. It is possible, he said, that a city police lieutenant may make less than a sergeant in another jurisdiction.

Benefits

The main benefit concern of the FOP is the retirement system. All of the large police forces have left the MCLEO system. Keeping that system functioning would require high contributions for low benefits. Although the officers had the option to join the enhanced state retirement system, they opted not to do so, as it would have required them to work longer.

The FOP is currently studying alternate systems. They told council they need an updated actuarial study. McLaughlin said that a new study could be done at any time. However, the studies are costly (roughly $7,500), so he is reluctant to recommend that one be conducted until the FOP has narrowed its options and is ready to make a decision based upon the results. He did not specifically fund it in the budget for that reason, but was confident that funds would be available when needed.

Snow Policy

Greenbelt's government did not close on January 25, when many other jurisdictions did. The federal government closed, although this closure was announced late. As a result, employees who decided that they could not safely make it in to work were charged a day's leave. Those who did come in received only their normal pay. The FOP requested that employees who did not come in should have their leave restored because the city government should have closed, and those who did report to work should be rewarded for their efforts with overtime pay.

The FOP found a receptive audience among the councilmembers to the concern that the city does not have a clearly stated snow policy nor any good way to announce the city government's status to workers. They also mentioned several times that they did not have the option exercised by the city manager of hitching a ride to work on a snow plow. (Davis had little sympathy with this argument "So move back to Greenbelt," she said.)

McLaughlin said that for as long as he has worked for the city, how to handle snow and other emergency situations has been handled on a case-by-case basis. The city government has closed only rarely. McLaughlin thought that the city had closed once in the 1990s and twice in the 1980s. When the city has closed, those employees who had to work received double time.

In the past, he said, most city employees were also city residents and the public works snow plowing gave them little reason to stay home. Now, however, employees are more dispersed, so McLaughlin agreed that it is probably time to consider a more formal policy. However, trying to separate city staff into essential and nonessential employees could be difficult. Obviously, police and the public works staff who work on snow removal are essential. The city tries to keep its recreational facilities open since the schools are closed, and the administrative offices are the first place many citizens call for information, so he also tries to keep them open.

Council also directed McLaughlin to look at better ways to communicate the status of the city government to employees.

The request for compensation for the January storm, however, appeared a harder sell. The FOP worded their request in terms of wanting a liberal leave policy. Davis noted that liberal leave is exactly what the FOP was describing as having happened—staff (including, noted Jeff Wil-

Public Works Employees Seek Competitive Pay

by Betsy Likowski

Employees of the city's Department of Public Works told the city council of their concerns with cost of living adjustments (COLAs), merit pay, performance pay, and retirement plans at a worksession on Tuesday, April 25. This is the first time the public works employees have met with council to discuss their concerns. Mayor Judith Davis suggested they should meet with council on a regular basis, just as the employees of the police department meet with council once a year during budget review time to discuss their concerns.

These issues affect other city employees, too, said Karl Skaggs, crewleader for the Parks Department. Jeff Keifline of the horticultural crew and Joe Doss of the parks crews also spoke on behalf of the public works employees.

The main issue is that the city have a pay scale competitive with other jurisdictions and liams, city finance officer, some police officers) who did not feel they could make it in safely, stayed home and were charged a day of leave.

Roberts stated that he did not think it appropriate for the FOP to ask for extra pay just because they came to work. White said that he needed to apply a certain logic to his decisions. "Here I'm not seeing any logic," he said. Rogers said that the bottom line was that the city should not have been open.

one that keeps up with the local cost of living, said Skaggs. A chart handed out at the meeting (which was from the budget book for fiscal year 1998) showed the COLA's for Greenbelt employees at 2.75% in FY93, 1.5% in FY94, 1.5% in FY95, 0 in FY96 and FY97. In comparison to other jurisdictions, at the low end employees for Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission received only one COLA of 3% in that period in FY95. At the high end Bowie city employees received COLAs of 3% in FY93, FY94, FY95, FY97 and 2.5% in FY96. After five or six years two and three percent becomes a significant amount to a lot of people, said Skaggs.

Also discussed was merit pay. In FY93 thru FY97 the range of merit pay was 1.33-4%. During the same time period on the high end, College Park employees received 5% every fiscal year, and on the low end, Laurel workers received merit pay in FY93 and FY94 at a range of 1.7-3% and none the other three fiscal years. In Greenbelt, employees who have risen to the top of their grade are only eligible for the 1.33% merit pay.

Councilmembers expressed their empathy for the employees. There is $125,000 in the proposed budget set aside so that council can address salary inequities if it so chooses, said City Manager Michael McLaughlin. Council could decide to review and work on these issues when a compensation review report is completed. City staffer Connie Harris is surveying 10-12 local communities to compare how they address issues raised at this worksession. And the report will compare job to job, for example the pay a foreman receives in Greenbelt to one in College Park, explained McLaughlin. And as part of this whole discussion, staff has thought of having a look into deciding where the city's pay and compensation scale should be in comparison to other local cities. For example should the city's pay be in the top 25% of local governments, said McLaughlin.

Joe's Tip Of The Week!

Hello Again

WOW! Got hot quick these last couple of days! So did a lot of the cars that came into the repair facility. Just think, it's only been a few days of hot weather. Can hardly think what will happen in a few more weeks. As time and wear and tear become a major factor in the extended serviceability of our vehicles it becomes very important that the maintenance items be checked and evaluated for the coming months. With new vehicles, wearable items are lasting longer than they once did. With that in mind, they get forgotten about. Then it becomes necessary to get the vehicle into the service bay for attention. The objective here is to stop any "RESULTING" damage due to a condition that occurred like, for example, a stuck thermostat: engine overheats & ruptures a hose. Car was overheating before the hose ruptured, due to the thermostat. Now the hose has ruptured from the root cause! THERMO-STAT. See how this domino effect can affect components. Sometimes it's very expensive! This is what preventable maintenance is.

Take care
 Think Preventive maintenance

Museum Budget Increase Asked to Fund Full-Time Curator

by Altoria Bell Ross

The Greenbelt Museum asked for support from the Greenbelt City Council for a $2,000 budget increase in fiscal year 2001 (FY2001) to help fund a full-time curator and an additional $500 to cover miscellaneous operating expenses at a May 1 worksession. The museum's FY 2000 budget was $14,000.

In 1986, the city bought a perpetual use contract for the house at 10-B Crescent Road for use as a museum. The city pays Greenbelt Homes, Inc.'s (GHI) monthly charges, provides insurance, takes care of the building's exterior and its grounds and pays part of the cost of the museum's curator. The Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM), a private citizens' group, pays the utility bills and operates the museum.

In running the museum, FOGM has applied for a matching grant from the Maryland Historical Trust to expand to full-time the part-time curator's position currently held by Katie Scott-Childress. If approved, the city would contribute $12,000; FOGM, $10,000; and the Trust, $21,000, totaling $33,000 for the curator's salary and $10,000 for benefits, according to Sandra Lange, president of FOGM. For the next three fiscal years, the additional funds, between $10,000 and $15,000, will have to be appropriated.

"We are a growing organization," Lange said. "We are increasing our attendance and the hours professional staff are involved in the museum and working on activities." An estimated 1,687 people visited the museum in 1999. They included groups from the Philippines and Japan, as well as locals from the Girl Scouts to the University of Maryland School of Architecture, according to the city's proposed budget report for FY01.

Mayor Judith Davis asked if the museum would be open on Saturdays if it had a full-time curator. At present, 35 volunteer docents give tours from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays and during the week by appointment. "We certainly would want to make that a goal," Lange said.

"Why do you need a full-time person since you have so many volunteers?" Councilmember Rodney Roberts asked.

"They (the volunteers) don't do programming and they are not involved in the day-to-day activities. They don't do research," said Mary Linstrom, FOGM board member.

"I'm just having a problem with increasing the staff," Roberts said.

"A curator is not a warm person, sitting there all day," Davis said. "They take care of materials." According to the budget report, the curator is responsible for preserving and cataloging furnishings, textiles, and other items used in the 1930s and 1940s that are displayed at the museum.

"I need to be convinced," Roberts said.

"I think tourism would increase if you have a full-time person," said Jill Parsons St. John, assistant curator. "Tourism would increase revenue to the town."

"Can you show me in the next three years we can cover the cost?" Roberts asked. "The proof's in the pudding, right?"

"We have sold a lot of houses," said Lange, who mentioned that St. John moved here from Arlington, VA.

"Do we get a cut from GHI for that?" he asked.

"I support this 100%," said Councilmember Edward Putens, who explained Roberts' stance. Putens said the city council has received many requests for more staffing, and the council is under a great deal of pressure to decide on who gets extra personnel. Putens gave an example of whether to grant a request for more staff to aid senior citizens or for additional help at the museum.

"The commitment you make is a commitment of good faith," Lange said. "For now, this is a good opportunity when we have a major matching grant, and it sort of eases the burden."

"If a couple of councilmembers would renew their memberships, that would help with the fundraising," Davis quipped.

Councilmember Thomas White suggested the museum staff contact the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for funding.

but Lange did not think the organization would be interested in assisting them. After an extended discussion on other budget issues, Davis upheld the museum's existence.

"The museum's a good place for people to learn about the history of the city of Greenbelt," she said.

"It seems like I'm made out as a scrooge. I'm just being a devil's advocate," Roberts said. "We can't continue to raise taxes every year. I think we have to be prudent for the long-term. You can't go on forever like that. If we get to the point where we have more income, we can spend more."

CARES Budget

Following the museum budget review, Greenbelt CARES Director Carol Leventhal briefed council on the organization's accomplishments. She reported that the parenting skills workshops that convened in February at Springhill Lake Elementary School and led by psychologist Shane Perrault are doing well.

"He's doing an excellent job and has gotten the same people to come every week," Leventhal said. "I've been told they won't go home."

She said that participants who come either on Wednesday evenings or Saturday mornings are parents of the children who attend the elementary school. The school's principal had referred many of them.

These workshops, along with anger management sessions at Greenbelt Elementary and Eleanor Roosevelt High schools, have resulted from a $40,075 grant CARES received in January from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. However, the sessions at Roosevelt are not going as well as the parenting workshops, Leventhal said.

"The high school has an attendance problem. They (the students) are either on suspension or in jail," she said. Leventhal added that these sessions are involuntary, and the students are often sent by guidance counselors.

Another CARES service that Leventhal highlighted was the Crisis Intervention Counselors program, whose staff fielded 154 calls last year for help with sexual assaults, domestic violence, and other family issues. Despite the telephone calls for assistance, Leventhal said the domestic violence program that started in May is having difficulty getting off the ground because of low attendance.

"All the stuff you do over there is unbelievable," said Putens to Leventhal.

"We are trying to fill the gaps," said Davis, referring to the various social services the organization via the city offers the community. CARES, too, is seeking to fill in the gaps — in pay for FY01. It is proposing a $5 an hour increase for the CARES consulting psychologist, whose last raise was in FY98, and increased salaries and benefits to staff (totaling $20,100). CARES FY00 budget is $280,400; the agency is requesting $300,300 for FY01.

Council and staff also discussed some of the special revenue funds, including one for the city cemetery on Ivy Lane that no longer has available lots. Davis suggested designating a place for those who have been cremated. In reference to the debt service fund, Michael McLaughlin, city manager, said the city is on schedule to be debt-free in six years.

During discussion of the replacement fund, he explained that vehicles are replaced based on the operating record rather than solely on age and that the city does its own service maintenance. He added that smaller crews are assigned to vehicles, and when this happens, the driver tends to take good care of it.

Vehicles listed to be purchased in FY01 include a $115,000 refuse truck, a $20,000 passenger van, and a $25,000 4 x 4 truck.
